

In the Abstract:

Please replace the abstract with the following:

The current invention relates to a method of identifying drugs that can mediate the biological activity of a target protein. This invention further relates to reagents, especially peptides, useful in the method of identifying drugs that can mediate the biological activity of a target protein. The present invention also relates to reagents useful in more directly mediating the biological activity of the target protein or in binding to said target protein themselves.